Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Please protect our oceans and their wildlife. Do NOT weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. If anything, we should be aggressively INCREASING protections for our oceans. ALL the scientific data points towards an ongoing and severe degradation of life in our oceans. Overfishing, wasteful and destructive fishing methods, and habitat degradation and loss have taken a massive toll on ocean life. It is unfathomable to me how anyone can suggest we should be weakening existing ocean protections. It would be a blind and reckless act. Thank you for considering my comments

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I also support making ocean and fish habitat protection more effective by consolidating the rules and guidelines from multiple agencies. Keep the most protective rules and eliminate ones that conflict or potentially weaken the guidelines.

We only have one earth and we must take definitive measures to repair and protect the oceans and habitats. Being poor stewards of our environment is to the detriment of ourselves and future generations.

The coastal areas of California are not only a precious natural heritage, but they are the backbone of hundreds of small town economies up and down the coast. It makes zero economic sense to participate in the degradation of a precious economic engine for middle class California - the backbone of our growth cycle here.

I appeal not only to your moral sense - of course you know we should protect the environment - but also to your business sense. Tourists don't come to look at dead water, declining evegetation and smell less than fresh air.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I am extremely concerned about the destruction, pollution, and noise in our oceans. Oceans are being over fished, mini-environments are being destroyed, oil and other pollutants spills in single hulled ships pollute our oceans. Whales and dolphins, who used to communicate "whale songs" to one another at distances of hundreds of miles are being cut off from members of their own species because of the noise of cruise and other ships.

Please do everything you can to protect our oceans.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. At the rate that corporate greed is speeding, under the evil guise of "progress", there is not going to be any oceans left for anyone's children and grandchildren.

The fact of the matter is, that most people in industry are ignorant about marine habitats. When you add the arrogance factor to that, you get the worst kind of human being, and they get to bypass accountability by hiding behind corporate anonymity. If you are thinking clearly, there is no way you can get behind empowering a few near-sighted, irresponsible and greedy corporate idiots to destroy the oceans permanently.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I have a friend who has worked on studies on Stellar Sea Lions and they found that in their concern for their drop in numbers that many of the young were starving and way below weight. In turn, in this area, the killer whales who eat seals were turning to the smaller sea otter having to eat more of them and therefore lowering their numbers too. They believe this chain of events has to do with the seals loss of enough fish to eat.

Please help with at least essential fish nursery habitat.

Sincerely,

Susan Marlow

I think we have already done more than enough to harm the earth. Why there seems to be only a select few of us who actually care enough about the future of this planet to want to stop the killing of the environment. We all have a future at stake in this world and should do everything possible to protect and improve it, not continuously damaging it and all the living things on it.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

For too long the oceans have been seen as the perfect dumping ground. It is now apparent that they, too, are not unlimited. Between dead zones in the ocean, PCBS in the polar ice caps, native people living in those regions and our whale populations, and collapses of major fisheries resources it is apparent that the oceans need to be protected from human harm. This includes fishing, pollutants and population pressure on the coastal areas among other things. I hope you see the importance of this resource and protect it for your children and grandchildren.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I live in the Puget Sound basin in Washington State. We have many unique species here not found else where as well as endangered species and commercial species of fish. Due to a combination of historical and present practices the Puget Sound, Straights of Juan de Fuca and Pacific Ocean are in jepordy.

According to a just released report by the US Commission on Ocean Policy we are doing far too little to protect our fish stocks and marine waters. This bi-partisan federally apointed commission has called for immediate action to correct the serious ongoing degradataion of our waters. Please let me know what specific steps your office is taking to implement the measures called for in the US Commission on Ocean Policy report and how the current proposal you are seeking public comment on will implement these measures as well.

Sincerely,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Our oceans are experiencing overfishing, habitat destruction and cruise ship & oil pollution which all contribute to the decline in health of marine life and delicate ecosystems. These ecosystems are vital to all life on our planet. We cannot allow business and government to continue to destroy our home, planet Earth. You're in a position to help. Please . . .

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Once destroyed, it is so very difficult to put things back the way they were. The current attitude in politics seems to be take what we want, regardless of cost, and let the future take care of itself. This is shortsighted and foolish. Please don't succumb to the selfish and dangerous requests made by those trying to wring every last bit of life out of the oceans. They will be the first to blame you for not doing something to save it.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Please consider the legacy we leave our children if we allow further damage to the health of the oceans. The efforts of your agency should be focused on finding better ways to reduce the amount of pollutants currently found in our seafood, as a part of securing the future of the fisheries industry, not weakening the protections now in place.

The short-sighted 'solution' of relaxing the rules will have long-term negative effects on the health of the food chain, as well as the fisheries industry.

Please plan for the long-term.

Conserve Our Ocean Legacy!

Our oceans no longer sustain as much life as they used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, and poor management have all led to this alarming decline in the health of our oceans.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

As we all already know, we are on a decline in all fish, and other species in our waterways, including oceans. We can not afford to continue this disregard to our very own supply. We need to become a generation of sacrificers in order to let the next generations thrive. This is not much to ask for from a country that still devours 80% of the world's cavier. Why not limit our consumption to 50% instead, or less. As far as our coasts are concerned, we can all use a good education, as in, major public awareness campaigns! I know so many people who would love to help our government organize, and expedite a campaign to help save our vital oceans, that if they are not protected, we will all die!

Al Queda is small fries compared with what will happen, if we don't!

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

What is our president thinking? Consistent with his willful ignorance of all environmental concerns and issues, he is poised to remove some of the few remaining ocean protections. These are the only hope of keeping diversity of species, which he probably doesn't believe is important, due to his creationist views.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans -- and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. The health of our oceans reflects the health of our Earth as a whole, and weakening guidelines would serve as a doomsday to the inhabitants of both.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Although the oceans take up 70% of Earth's surface both the ocean and the planet are finite. We live in an enclosed biosphere, and the only one that can support life within 40 light years (the distance of the closest solar system). Given the necessity of continued resources, please protect our habitats.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Over the last few years, we have been hearing numerous reports indicating that our oceans are endangered, from being 90% overfished, to the massive depletion of once bountiful species, to the near-toxic abundance of mercury, anti-depressants, and other chemicals, in various fish. I strongly support increased regulation and protection of the oceans and find any attempts at rolling back any of the current regulations to be quite shocking in light of the current situation.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Think how much change, devastation of habitat and reduction of stocks have occurred in 30 years, 50, 100. Just two hundred years ago, Lewis and Clark were mapping the country which was, at that time, an unknown wilderness. Each year geometric progression destroys more. There is no time to waste. If we foul our nest, it will not sustain life for us and, most important, for the next generation to which, ethically, we owe careful stewardship.

Don't bow to instant gratification, short term greed. All too soon even greed will have nothing much to hoard.

And as for God's will and environmental destruction, I say nonsense. That's why it is called FAITH and should never factor into scientific or political decisions.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Although it claims to be both compassionate and conservative, I find that the current administration is neither. We'll leave aside compassionate, and focus on conservative.

It is not conservative but radical to allow our oceans (and the rest of our environment as well) to be seriously degraded. There is no trade-off between the environment and the economy. To claim economic benefit from the destruction of the environment is to use rigged numbers, to allow the continued transfer of costs, and to look at a time frame so short it has already passed. The environment is the economy. Its destruction or degradation will impoverish us all.

And as Wendell Berry has said, "Nature bats last."

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I am troubled to learn that changes are being considered that might weaken the habitat safeguards of the Magnuson-Stevens Act. As a consumer, I am noting the higher prices and growing scarcity that already reflect stresses on marine resources already.

More importantly, living in a state where fishing is a considerable factor, I am concerned about any moves that could diminish long-term sustainability of commercial fish populations. The implications for the economy of my state would be severe!

Mr. Rolland Schmitten,

As a resident of one of our nation's threatened beaches, I see the daily affects of manmade ocean hazards wash up on my neighborhood shores. These shores were once home to immense kelp forests, important natural fish hatcheries which have become extinct within my own lifetime.

Please, I beg you to salvage our remaining fish habitats. Please show resolution and bravery by resisting pressure from various lobbying interests who insist that commercial fishing jobs are at stake. Please help them understand that one generation's sacrifice is worth countless future generations benefitting from sustainable harvesting practices.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

If you think we have no or little problems with our oceans, just ask anyone who has gone to the coast over the past several years. It is obvious and scary to think we are destroying our waters inch by inch and at a very rapid rate. Compare the water now with 100 years ago and the difference is stupefying. We are expecting those of you charged with caring for our planet to do all in your power to start moving us in the right direction. Not just for the fish and habitat, but for all of humanity.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Our oceans are already in dire trouble due to overfishing, habitat destruction, pollution from cruise ships and pollution of all other types. To weaken current ocean protections would be insanity. If anything, we should be strengthening protections to ensure ocean food sources for ourselves and for the generations of the future, and to ensure that we don't fatally upset the ecological balance of the our planet by allowing our oceans to die.

I urge you to fight to keep the protections we already have, and to insist upon strengthening existing protections as well.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

My daughter is only seven and I want her to be able to swim in clean oceans with lots of healthy fish and turtles and otters and seals and birds. I don't want her to have to avoid tuna because of the risk of high mercury, or have only farmed salmon that are pumped full of antibiotics and coloring to choose from because all the wild salmon are endangered. If you have children I think you would want the same things for them.

Waiting to protect something that is in danger, especially something that is so vital to all the people in the world, is not an option. Please do what you can to help remedy this problem.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

The ocean is not an infinite resource. It must be taken care of and not treated as a receptacle for our garbage. Its resources must only be taken in a sustainable manner. What we do to this precious resource in a negative way will ultimately come back to haunt us.

If some don't care about the intrinsic value of the life our oceans hold, maybe they might think it could hold cure for cancer or Parkinson's disease waiting to be discovered.

Please don't allow the Bush administration to weaken regulations that help to protect the oceans. It will be a disaster in the loss of sea life and only cost everyone more money when we ultimately have to clean it up.

I trust you will do the right thing.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. It's shameful how humans are threatening the well being of our oceans. It's unacceptable that we continue to pollute, overfish and otherwise neglect the health of one of our most precious resources, the oceans. Furthermore, it's appalling that the U.S. Navy insists on deploying the new sonar systems, that will undoubtedly cause numerous species pain and suffering.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Once they are polluted it is so very difficult to return them to a healthy state. We humans are people that are polluters. We must stop being so.

If one grows bacteria on a petri plate they will not extend their colonies indefinitely for they die of their own pollution. Humans are likely to do this themselves and certainly the sea creatures are also harmed and may become extinct. We must guard against extinction of all that is on earth through human negligence.

Sincerely,

Mariana Halsan

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. We do not have any "reserve" oceans to exchange for the ones that will be ruined completely a few years from now. As a voter and concerned citizen I ask myself, why this administration is so hell bent to destroy our diminishing natural treasures. Apparently this administration does not care about what comes after it leaves. As the president said when asked about how history will view his administration, "history ? We'll all be dead".

It is sad.

If anything it would be great if greater areas along the California Coast could be protected from fishing and motor boat pollution.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

It is time to weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. I want our fishermen to have their jobs. I want reasonably priced fish. People are more important than fish.
Let the fishing industry determine fishing limits.

The views of the Environment California Organization do not represent reasonable Americans and need to be taken for what they are worth.

Continued or increased destruction of biodiversity in such a vast and difficult to monitor environment can only lead to significant long term and possibly irreversible consequences. Dear Mr. Schmitten,

As a marine researcher, I am deeply concerned about the state of the world's oceans. Pollution and overexploitation of marine resources have already killed off large swaths of reef communities, benthic communities, and, according to the Pew report on oceans released last year, 90% of the world's fish stocks. Current marine harvest practices are completely unsustainable. We desperately need stronger, not weaker, marine conservation regulations.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I have always been fond of the ocean and the life that it sustains. The oceans have also blessed humans with a means of transportation, food sources, mystery and wonder.

So we can not turn our back on the oceans during this crucial time. We must stop thinking in a small-minded and short-sighted way and think of the vast universe of creatures that exist and are supported by the oceans on the planet.

We must also consider that if we pollute the oceans, if the life in the oceans die, soon our demise will follow. We are interconnected and this isn't just a spiritual concept. If you follow quantum physics at all then you will learn the law of cause and effect. And that everything is connected by an energetic bond.

So even if you see no beauty or mystery in the oceans. Even if you're not moved by the precious gifts of the oceans, you still consider your place in history. Do you want to be responsible for the demise of ocean life and all life on the planet? Or do you want to be the person who put his foot down and said, "yes, we are going to protect our natural resources for future generations of all species."

I urge you to support the protection of the oceans. Thank you.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Our oceans are a rich, unexplored bounty, and weakening those fishing habitat guidelines will only serve to destroy what we barely understand. Our focus in the oceanic environment should be a model of research and sustainability; weakening the existing guidelines will give us neither.

Please protect this valuable habitat, for ourselves and future generations.

Sincerely,

If existing protections keep getting weakened, the fish will die off. As a result, tourism upon which California depends economically will decline.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

The oceans are the planet's greatest sources of global climate regulation, food and life. Just because we don't live in them doesn't mean they are not important both inherently as well as in terms of overall ecological and human health. Please, please, please -- we have witnessed so many environmental regulations weakened or repealed in the last three years. It would be a shame to see the same phenomenon happen offshore.

Many thanks,

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

We exist on the surface of a web of life. This health of this web is vital to humanity, in terms of enriching the aesthetics human existence and as a fundamental necessity for our own survival.

It is not always possible to fully gauge the harm we are doing. Once the Mediterranean sea was as biotically diverse as a rainforest; due to human impacts beginning in the 1800s, it became nearly as barren as a desert; its recovery lacks any semblance of its previous biodiversity. In recent months, international studies have revealed vast "dead zones" adrift in our oceans.

Evidence is growing that we are destroying the roots of oceanic habitat. From dumping of toxic waste, to sewage outfalls, to exhaust from water vehicles, to damming, to overfishing, we are sabotaging the beauty of nature's diversity and toying with our own survival.

We must be prepared to err on the side of caution. We must draw the line firmly.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

As a "Navy Brat", I grew up along the ocean shore--well, both of the ocean shores, really, as my dad had duty in Florida as well as California and Washington State.

I love the ocean, it gives me great peace, and an incredible sense of home--a feeling I can't get anywhere else, even though I've been in Seattle now since 1975. Maybe moving every year as I grew up has something to do with that.

All I love about life and every pleasure of the senses comes from a clean and bountiful and beautiful environment--not the clean of a hospital, but the clean of fresh air and slapping waves; not the bounty of cars and computers but the bounty of abundant wildlife. We owe it to our host to leave the place as good or better than we found it. We owe it to ourselves, and to our children, and to our children's children. The earth is not ours to destroy, it is ours to use wisely for a time and then to return.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Please!

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Ocean habitats, which include coral, sea grasses, sandy bottoms and rocks, all provide fish with the food, shelter, spawning areas and nursing grounds that are essential to their continued survival. The various habitats that are essential to fish survival are collectively called essential fish habitat.

Currently, under the Magnuson-Stevens Act, essential fish habitat is protected under federal law. However, the National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS), the agency in charge of federal fisheries, is currently considering making changes to the existing protections.

The National Marine Fisheries Service has requested that the public comment on potential revisions to the essential fish habitat guidelines. This is the second time that the National Marine Fisheries Service has requested comments in several months. Last time, only about 50 groups commented, so your voice will have a real impact.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

This year I have become a volunteer beach naturalist, teaching beachgoers in the Seattle area about the ocean life found on the seashore. Both through my own experience and the education received to become a VBN, I learned the fragility and importance of ocean habitat. I have seen the signs of degradation in person here in the Puget Area, along the Oregon Coast, and along the Baja Peninsula. It is my sincere hope that you will take actions that not only decrease the environmental degradation, but will actually help it improve.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I would ask that trade and commerce activities include input from an oceanographer advisory group -- it is essential that the physical/chemical and natural processes responsible for maintaining viable oceans not be obstructed.

Estuaries are the most important environment for aquatic/marine resources including fish.

I am practical -- I realize, too that such areas have astronomical value to human populations. Please let us not plough ahead with economic considerations and discount biological ones, of which we are a part.

Thank-you for you time.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I am very disturbed to hear that certain special interest groups are trying to convince Bush to weaken existing fish habitat guidelines. These guidelines are essential to allow fish to continue to live in our oceans. Why would anyone want to destroy the "homes" of these precious creatures? The long term effects of removing or weakening these ocean protections could be devastating. If the habitats are not protected the fish are not protected. This could in turn cause changes in our fish populations and the ecosystems within the ocean.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat protections!!

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I am a fisherman who fishes both in ocean waters and, for several anadromous fish species, in tidal estuaries and rivers. While I sometimes question fishing closures, especially when I hear from fishermen in the area that they see no decline in fish stocks, I am more concerned, ultimately, with the ongoing health of fish and marine populations as well as of habitat. For that reason, I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish and marine mammal habitat guidelines.

Undoubtedly you know that each year brings more news of fisheries in serious trouble. How long must we continue to push the envelope in our oceans? Research has shown that many fish and mammal populations can not restore themselves once they go beyond a certain point.

Because we do not know exactly where these points lie, responsible, forward-looking legislation must now act in a PRECAUTIONARY way, not only with regard to the oceans but with regard to other possible impacts upon human and animal health.

Please seek to be a builder, not a destroyer.

Dear Mr. Schmitten and friends,

I urge you to protect our oceans and our environment and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines and other environmental restrictions in the interest of "Special Interests".

We are being buried in our own garbage from the ground and oceans up and the sky down.

>From what you all are doing to our environment, it looks like you want to milk it for all its worth because Washington has told you that the world is going to end in three or four more years. If that be the case, then what you all are doing is probably ok.

Sincerely,

Encourage industries that rely on the ocean for commerce to be responsible in their practices.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. I have traveled extensively throughout Europe, Mexico and Canada, California has one of the most beautiful coastlines in existence. The people of California and it's visitors enjoy it's coastline all year long and feel about it as they would a National Park. It is very important in this day and age, with all that is going on in the world that we make every effort to keep America beautiful for our mental health and for our children. Remember it is almost impossible to reverse any negative action we take on our environment. You are entrusted to represent the public not just special interest, please do so. Thank You, Patti Schwinge
